

The Code of Practice is a document that explains what is fair for artists and arts workers.

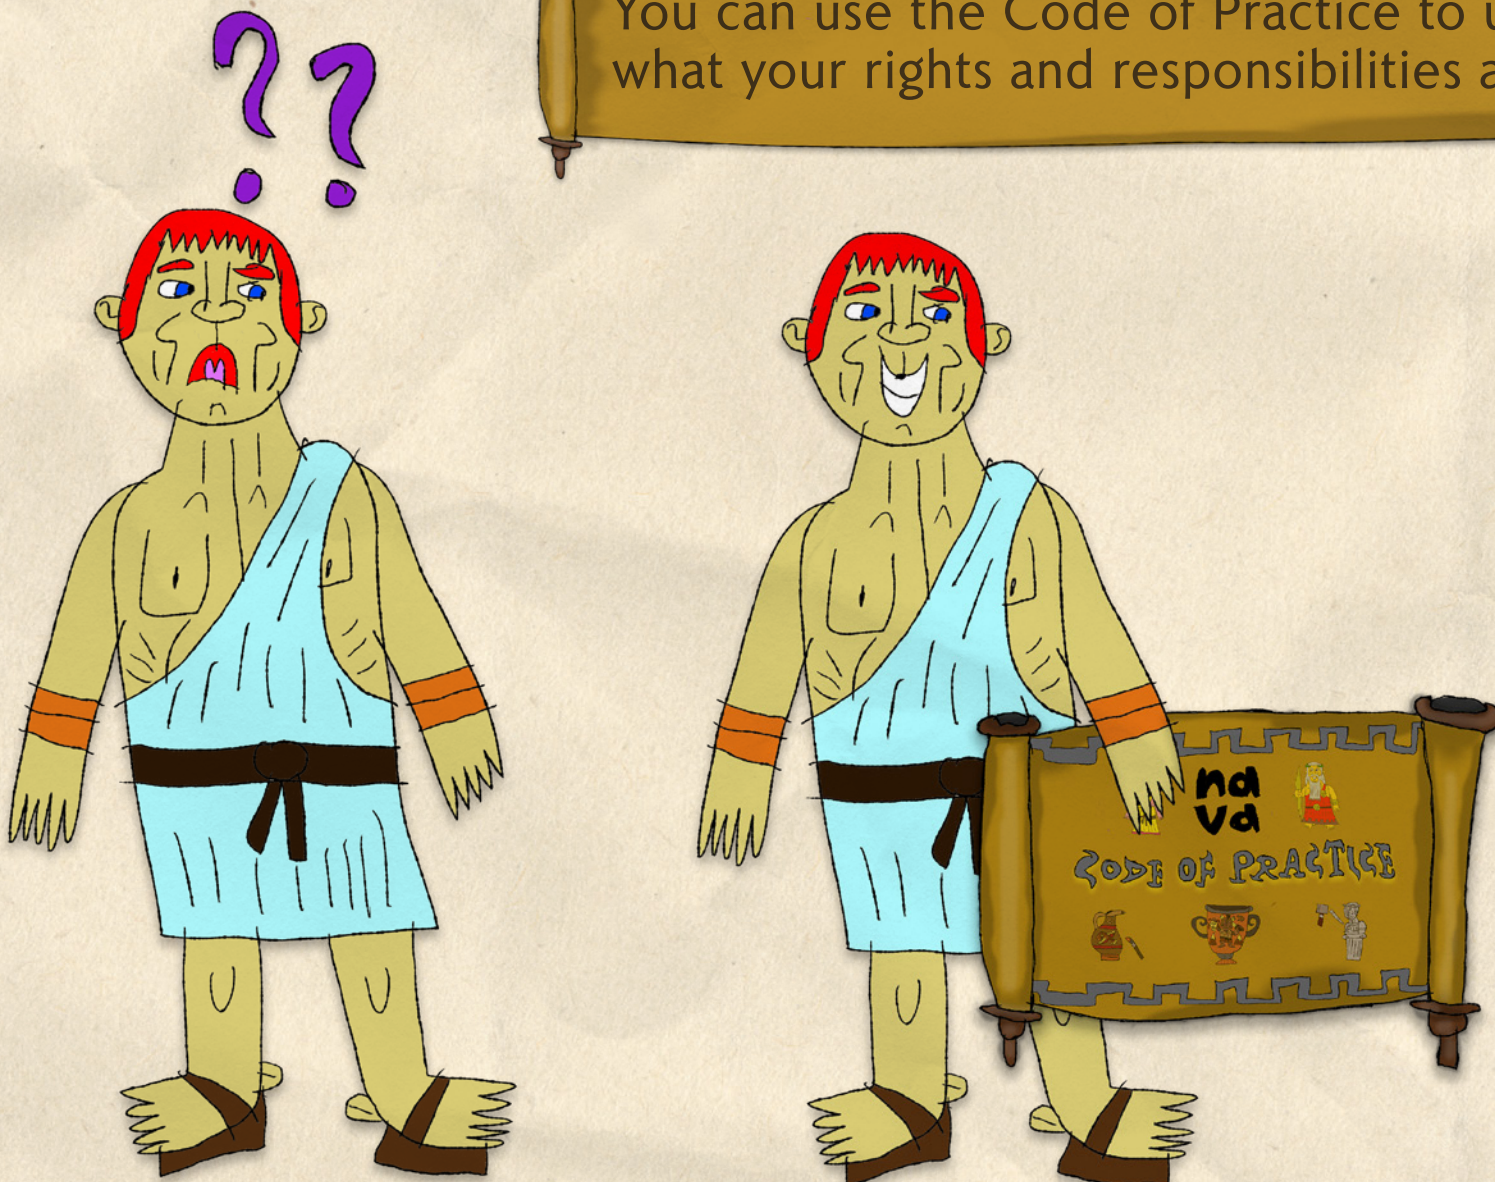

NAVA, The National Association for the Visual Arts, is the organisation who created the Code.

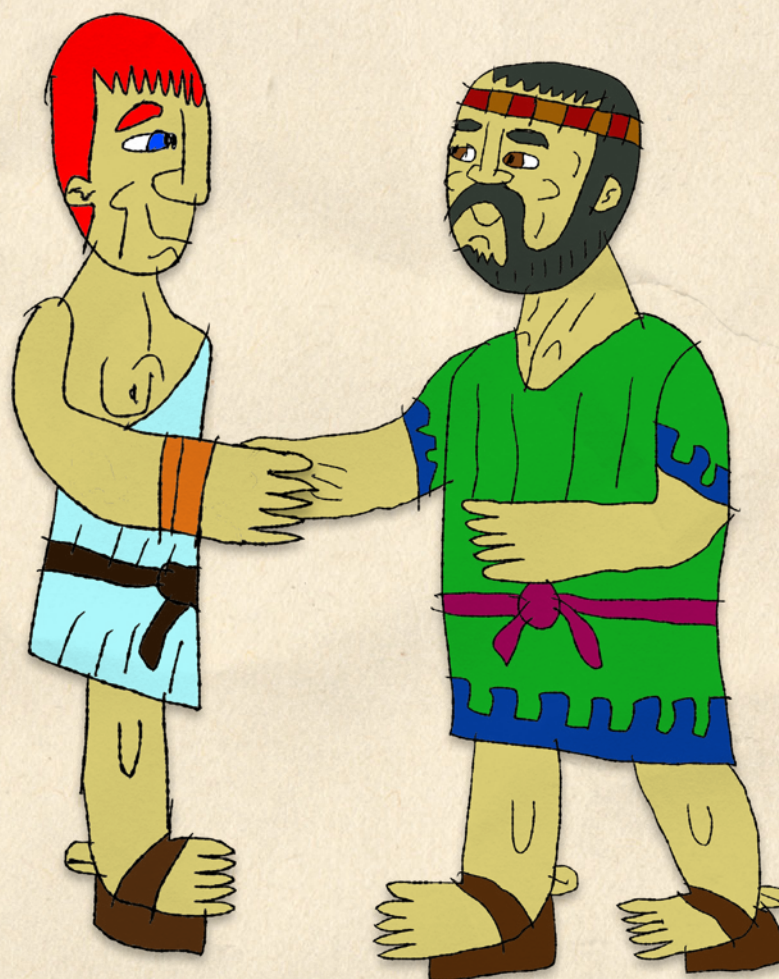

The Code helps artists, arts workers and organisations work together fairly.

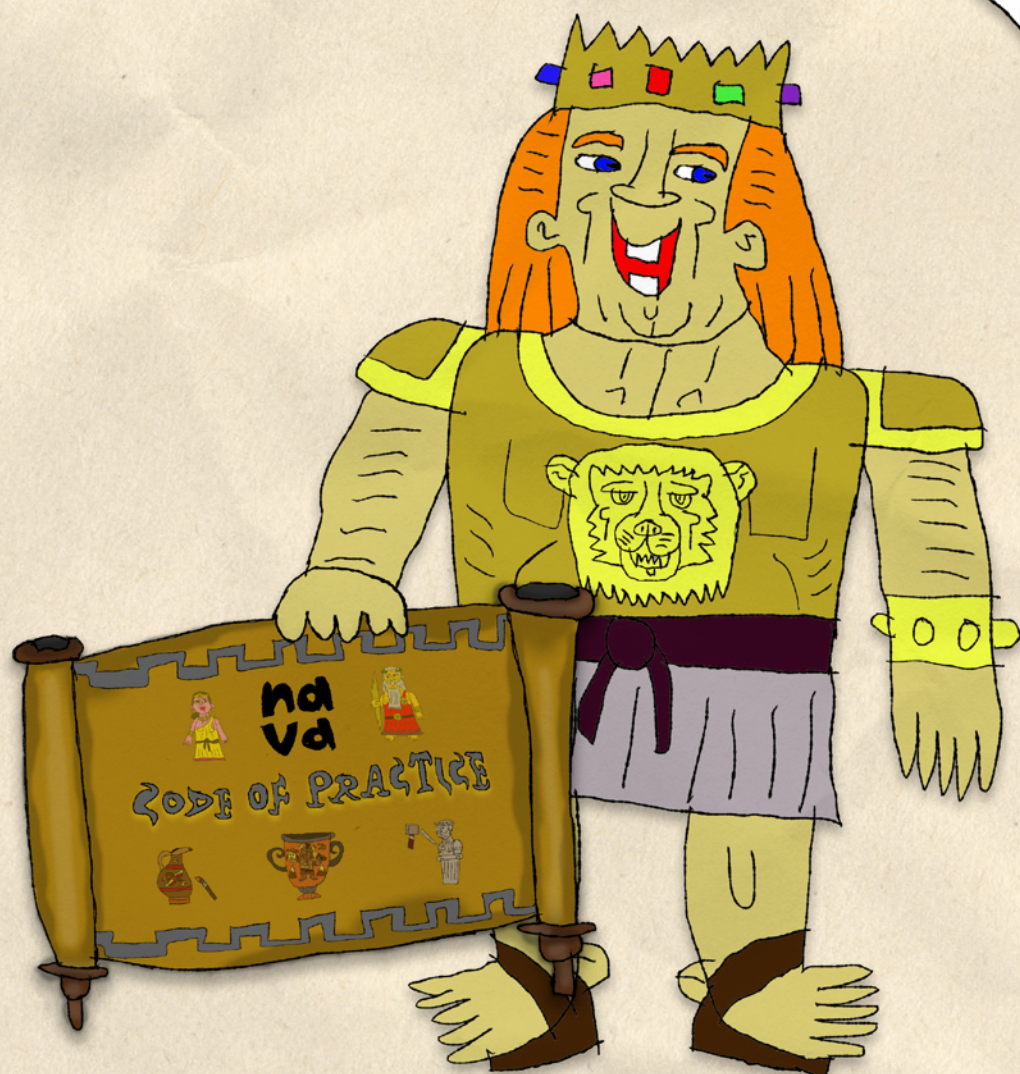

You can use the Code of Practice to understand what your rights and responsibilities are.

You can also use the Code to make fair agreements when people and groups make art together.

It can also help you find out how much someone should be paid for making art, allowing use of their art, or working on projects.

You can read the Code of Practice here:
code.visualarts.net.au

This document has been illustrated by Greg Sindel with production support provided by Studio A.

Content has been developed in collaboration with NAVA.